Slice of Fashion™ launches to bring fun and fashion to life's chronic ailments

Boulder, CO – February 25, 2006 -- Slice of Fashion™, a Boulder, Colorado-based business, launched at the Young Breast Cancer Survivors Conference this weekend. Kim Decker, owner and breast cancer survivor at the age of 33, created Slice of Fashion™ to bring fun and fashion to life's chronic ailments. The first fashion accessory available from Slice of Fashion™ is the Sliver Sleeve™, an elegant and fun arm sleeve for lymphedema sufferers. Lymphedema is a chronic swelling of a body part, such as an arm or leg, which is common with breast cancer surgery and treatment. Many lymphedema sufferers wear a drab compression garment to support the arm and reduce swelling. The Sliver Sleeve™ is worn over this compression garment, offering people the opportunity to add some pizzazz to their outfit.

Slice of Fashion™ offers two styles of arm sleeves: The Everyday Sliver Sleeve™ style fits securely at the upper arm and wrist, adjustable with snaps for a fit look. The Elegant Sliver Sleeve™ fits from the upper arm to the middle finger, providing an elegant V shape on the hand. Made out of cotton spandex and silk blends, these Sliver Sleeves™ will dress up your evening out on the town.

Decker began sewing these arm covers for herself when she developed Lymphedema in her left arm during cancer treatments. When warm weather hit, Decker decided to dress up her bland compression sleeve by sewing some fun fabrics into sleeves to cover the medical garment. "I want to take care of my arm, and feel good and look good at the same time." "We all have ailments of some kind, I just like to forget about mine for a little while and the Sliver Sleeve™ helps me have fun doing that."

Slice of Fashion, based in Boulder, Colorado, will continue to roll out more products geared toward improving life for sufferers of chronic illnesses. Ten percent of the profits from the sales of the Sliver Sleeve™ will go to lymphedema research.
